A STYLISH SEPTEMBER

This month, to celebrate the new collections hitting the fabulously chic boutiques in the fashion capital, we meet with American fashion designer, Monique Lhuillier, who shares with us what inspired her new collection. We also meet with shoe designer, Stuart Weitzman, who tells us the smartest way to pack.

The French capital plays host to the 27th Biennale des Antiquaires this month and with this prestigious event we bring you the finest jewellery pieces, exceptional paintings and fine furniture showcased during the ten days under the glass roof of the Grand Palais.

Limited edition collections, art-inspired fashions and handcrafted jewellery are only some of the things waiting for all fashionistas in our Shopping section while traditional Parisian brasseries, French pastries and top tables with the best views of the city are all found in our Dining section for our readers who enjoy eating their way through the city. Famous for its love of the arts and culture, Paris is also hosting a number of must-see exhibits and events this month including Antiquaires et Galeriste-Le Salon, which brings together 50 antique and art dealers under two pavilions along the Seine.

We hope you enjoy your stay in Paris and that you have enough time to discover everything it has to offer, and if not you will just have to come back!

The Sophisticated Traveller

On the road and on the runway with MONIQUE LHUILLIER

BY JENNIFER MCKEE

Fashion icon Monique Lhuillier is inspired by her surroundings wherever she goes, which adds extra charm and depth to her dramatic designs. We sat down with Lhuillier at the debut of her autumn 2014 collection and discovered what pieces she considers key for the season, her tips on packing light and what she does to quickly feel at home in a new destination.

Where do you find the inspiration for your designs?

I draw inspiration from a lot of different places. My favourite thing to do is travel, and when I go on these different trips, I just get so inspired, whether it's a beautiful art piece I'm looking at, people-watching on the street or a beautiful fabric that I see. The ideas just start, and it happens. So it's usually from travelling, but also just living. I'm drawn to beautiful things.

What was the inspiration behind the autumn 2014 collection?

It was the mysterious side of Monique. The season is very dramatic, it has a lot of darker shades—midnight, black and metallics. It's also sleeker. I tried to keep the collection dark and mysterious, but I also added some pops of colour in the fuchsia and the lush pink. In autumn I like to have the collection be a little more dramatic than romantic. I feel that women need that darker side.

A lot of people know you for the bridal. Are you expanding the ready-to-wear collection?

I started my company 17 years ago. The first seven years, I was only doing wedding gowns. Those were a great start for me, but then I wanted to dress women throughout their lives rather than just on that special day, which is how the ready-to-wear started. Now, I want to dress her earlier in the day, so you see more separates and what I call "high day" looks in the collection. It then goes into evening and gala gowns at night. Another new thing for me is shoes, this is my second season doing shoes.

What pieces or trends do you think are key for autumn?

I think a great lace shoe bootie is a must in the wardrobe. I also think a great cocktail dress with a great fit and a bit of shimmer is key for the wardrobe. The final component of my collection is the statement gowns—I love seeing women put that effort in and transform for that one evening and make it memorable, letting the fantasy back in.

What is the most important piece or pieces to your own personal style?

A great-fitting cocktail dress is a signature of mine. I feel like it's so versatile, it takes you to so many different places. I travel a lot and know these pieces serve a great purpose.

How often do you travel?

Twice a month.

What are your best travel tips?

To over-pack is just a drag. I always say plan your wardrobe two days before you leave and style it out with the shoes, the belts, etc., so that way you're very well-edited and it doesn't take up a lot of space. If you're organised, it makes travelling a breeze.

What is the first thing you do when you arrive at your new destination?

I like to unpack and get everything hung, and then I take a walk and see my surroundings—the neighbourhood, check out what sort of things there are to do in the hotel. I like to discover immediately.

How do you make a hotel room feel more like home?

I bring my music with me, that makes me feel at home. I also bring a fragrance with me, whether it be a candle or an air spray, so it smells like me and my environment. If it's a long stay, I order fresh flowers, which automatically makes it feel more cosy.

What are you listening to right now?

I listen to a lot of Pharrell. I also listen to Coldplay. I like to dance, so I have a lot of dance mixes—I love David Guetta, Justin Timberlake.

When you travel, do you like the aisle or window seat?

If I travel with somebody, like my husband, I like the window seat; but if I travel alone, I like the aisle. I like to be independent and not cross over anybody and bother anybody.

What's your favourite vacation spot?

Too many to mention! But I have some favourites. I love going to Venice and eating the delicious food—it's so beautiful. I also love going to Capri, I love staying at the J.K.Place Hotel, it feels like your own private beach house. We also love going to Aspen, Colorado, which is only a two-hour flight from Los Angeles—we're a very big outdoors family, so we ski a lot in the winter; in the summer we like to bike and hike. But I could go on. I also love Paris.

What's one thing you can't be without when you travel?

My iPhone, because I can take pictures with it, I'm always connected—if somebody needs me, I'm very accessible. I have my music, my pictures and it just keeps me on track.

STEPPING OUT WITH

Stuart Weitzman

Designer of the most coveted shoes around, Stuart Weitzman tells us how to put our best foot forward when on the road.

BY JENNIFER MCKEE

What are the key shoes every man and woman should have in their wardrobes?

A soft-as-butter boot, a black modern boot and whatever helps a woman feel sexy and beautiful.

What is the best way to pack shoes and handbags?

In a cloth bag.

What type of shoes should men and women take with them when travelling?

Whatever they can walk the farthest in and be the most comfortable.

What is your best tip for planning one's travel wardrobe?

Pack your favourite items, but pack lightly so it allows you the opportunity to shop on vacation.

If you could impart one piece of fashion wisdom to travellers, what would it be?

Make sure to pack at least one heel, as nothing has been invented yet that beats the high heel for making a good pair of legs look great and a great pair look fabulous!

A Beautiful Biennale

BY PATRICIA VALICENTI

The Biennale des Antiquaires continues to embody a world of refinement, elegance and style. The prestigious event is held every two years in the French capital and brings together quite simply the best of the best beneath the gleaming glass cupola of the Grand Palais. The show, organised by the Paris-based Syndicat National des Antiquaires, the French Union of Antique Dealers, is being held for the 27th time this year. It opened up for the first time in 1956 with the idea being to create an event in which the beauty of the objects would compete with that of the women in attendance.

Objects from Antiquity, exceptional fine furniture, masterful paintings and dazzling creations from the world of high jewellery are among the brilliant works ensconced in a thoroughly royal setting. For this year, interior designer Jacques Grange has created a décor inspired by the Versailles Gardens with help from the gardeners of the Château de Versailles and the Trianon. Trellises and arbours, fountains, groves and lawns come together for a perfect promenade. Upon entering the Grand Palais, an olfactory fountain by the house of Francis Kurkdjian plunges the visitor into the 18th century through the Bouquet de la Reine that inspired the fragrance. "La Biennale 2014 is an imaginary garden leading to exceptional objects," explains Jacques Grange. The Biennale takes us on a journey into worlds beyond our very own with singular objects, art works and dazzling ornaments from some 81 exhibitors, gallery owners, merchants and key actors in the art market as well as high-end jewellers.

The Galerie François Léage is participating in the show for the 19th time this year with exceptional pieces of furniture and objets d'art from the 18th century, presenting an astounding array of rare pieces including a pair of vases in midnight blue Chinese porcelain from the Louis XVI epoch. The Galerie Christian Deydier, which specialises in Asian art, is presenting a very rare horse head Haniwa, clay sculptures placed on ancient Japanese burial mounds, in terracotta from Japan's 6th century AD Kofun period. Meanwhile, the house of Kraemer is presenting a pair of Louis XV chased open-work gilded bronze andirons, whose twins are found in the Louvre in the same concept in which the other objects the gallery is presenting have their twin in a leading museum. Ceramic specialist Laurence Vauclair is showcasing an impressive selection of 19th and 20th century vases while the Galerie Ary Jan, whose speciality revolves around both Orientalist art and Belle Epoque paintings is presenting a meticulous selection of fine paintings from the late 19th and early 20th centuries in a Napoleon

III décor. And Applicat-Prazan, specialised in the School of Paris, is showcasing 20th century masters like Lucio Fontana and Serge Poliakoff.

High jewellery is also being celebrated at the Biennale with a sparkle this year as in years past. The House of Giampiero Bodino, Richemont's new high jewellery house, brings on pieces in a contemporary style infused with Italy's centuries old art and culture. The unique pieces in precious materials being presented by Mr. Bodino, who was appointed the creative director of the Richemont Group in 2002, evoke nine themes including the cameo, the Baroque and treasures of the sea. Meanwhile, the House of Piaget is celebrating both its 140th anniversary and the Biennale by creating 88 pieces of jewellery and 37 watches brought together in the Extremely Piaget Collection reflecting the 1960s and 70s, a major period in the house's creative history, with precious stones and superb colours in the limelight.

Dior is also presenting a collection of beautifully constructed precious high jewellery pieces in a collection entitled Archi Dior created by Victoire de Castellane who drew her inspiration from fashion designs by Christian Dior, while Chanel is bringing out the splendour of Café Society in a high jewellery collection of the same name, a name that evokes glamour, audacity and the cosmopolitan. Intricate form, complex design and superb craftsmanship are the hallmarks of the high jewellery pieces created by Wallace Chan who is returning to the Biennale this year with jewels created especially for the event.

Fine dining is also being celebrated once again during the Biennale with an ephemeral gastronomic restaurant. During the event, exclusive lunch and dinner menus by a succession of leading chefs including Guy Martin, Mauro Colagreco, Patrick Henririoux and Régis Marcon in conjunction with the luxury caterer, Potel et Chabot are being served.

Eternal Inédit

The leaf-shaped Arum ring is striking with its exceptional emerald set in diamonds while the Rose ring showcases a natural pink sapphire set in diamonds. Both pieces are found among the unique pieces fashioned by the French jeweller Inédit. These two jewels are, too, like others in the various collections, accompanied by a gemmological report, for the house puts great emphasis on the quality and purity of the precious gemstones that are used in the crafting of their astoundingly original pieces, while particular attention is placed upon the quality of the cut of the stone and its symmetry. Every step in the fashioning of each jewel is done in the house's workshops in Rouen in western France by the firm's highly skilled jewellers, setters and polishers. In these workshops each work is crafted entirely by hand by exceptional craftsmen.

It was in Rouen that it all began back in 1984 when Frank Margueron surrounded by a team of craftsmen created Inédit. Passion, creation and a certain state of mind are the bywords of the house, which opened its boutique in Paris in the Saint-Germain-des-Prés neighbourhood in 2007.

During the first International Biennale of Fine Craft and Creation, held in 2013 beneath the glass dome of the Grand Palais, Inédit set up a workshop in the celebrated structure. During the show the house created a ring whose design embodies the architectural concept of the glass roof of the Grand Palais, a structure that is riveted rather than welded. Work on the piece began in public view on September 11th, the day the show opened and was completed on September 15th. The Grand Palais ring has been re-released in a series limited to 17 pieces fashioned in white gold and diamonds.

Meanwhile, the Arabesques collection draws its inspiration from the Italian Renaissance. The rings are composed of 100 brilliant-cut diamonds set in satinated gold polished to a mirror finish. The Garden pendant, a unique piece, inspired by the French gardens of the celebrated landscape gardener André Le Nôtre, is a colourful affair of green garnets, obsidian, rock crystals, colour diamonds and white diamonds.

Inédit has been given the Joaillerie de France label guaranteeing that each piece has been made, mounted, set and polished in France and it has also been awarded the prestigious Living Heritage Company label, a mark of recognition of the French state put in place to reward French firms for the excellence of their traditional and industrial skills.

LUXURY TIME

The haute timepieces from the Swiss watchmaker Christophe Claret are now available for the first time in Paris in the heart of the Golden Triangle at the Arije flagship boutique. Christophe Claret has been developing and creating highly complex movements for various major watch brands for over two decades and is now today a brand in its own right. Innovation, perfection, uniqueness and exclusivity are hallmarks of the house. This year the house is presenting three new timepieces: Poker, Margot, the brand's first complication designed for ladies, and Maestoso (pictured), a limited edition wristwatch equipped with a traditional detent mechanism. Maestoso is doted with a high-precision regulator, which follows in the footsteps of 18th century marine chronometers. – P.V.

BOHEMIAN PIECES

In the bohemian 18th arrondissement of Paris jewellery designer Laurence Soulat creates her rock romance-inspired jewellery collection in her atelier boutique. All her pieces are made in the atelier and capture the essence of bohemian Paris with delicate feathers and precious stones used to add a je ne sais quoi essence to her designs. Soulat also works with gold and silver, moulding the elements to create rings, bracelets and earrings.

Unique Jewellery

In the charming Passage du Grand Cerf in the 2nd arrondissement is where you will find the Guillemain Paris atelier boutique. This quaint little boutique is where Didier Guillemain designs and creates his jewellery collections, for him and her, using silver and gold as well as titanium and ceramic. His designs are original and convey his love of being unique as illustrated by his City collection, a line of jewellery inspired by computer memory cards and aerial views of big cities including the City of Light. Meanwhile, his Yi King collection, inspired by I Ching The Book of Change, features rings symbolising both strength and serenity and allows each person to create their own unique band.

FEATHERED ACCESSORIES

Statement-making and feminine, the Joanna Laura Constantine jewellery line offers ladies who love accessorising a multitude of styles to choose from. While the designer's Flutter collection leans towards a more rock chic vibe with black stones and wing-shaped designs the Americana collection features detailed pieces inspired by feathers. Joanna Laura Constantine illustrates through her designs both her love of design and travel, creating both exotic and delicate designs with semi-precious stones, crystals and pearls.

Modern Moynat

Founded in 1849 by Pauline Moynat, the only female trunk-maker in history, the house of Moynat is famous for its savoir-faire in travel goods, for creating exquisite pieces ranging from trunks to beauty cases. The house today also designs handbags, every girl's favourite accessory, which includes the Tango bag. Inspired by the Belle Epoque, the Tango bag mixes a modern and structured form with Art Deco detailing and features a metal handle that is inspired by the bridge handle, which was developed by Moynat in the 20s to prevent trunks from opening accidentally.

HELLO TO BYEBUY

What started off as a hobby for two sisters who grew up in the suburbs of Paris has now become a fulltime job. Béatrice and Carole Blaise always admired the savoir-faire of high-end items and what started off with a simple bag purchase with their savings, followed by another, slowly became a passion for everything fine and slowly they added to their collection. Now the sisters, who educated themselves with the history of the luxurious French brands, give other equally passionate fashionistas, especially those who love everything vintage, a space to discover previously loved luxe finds. ByeBuy, their showroom in the Marais neighbourhood, is where you can find items designed by all the French fashion houses, including Dior, Vuitton and Chanel. The unique space can also be privatised, giving shoppers an opportunity to vintage shop, VIP-style.

64 rue Tiquetonne (2nd), 01.42.21.17.37.

M° Etienne Marcel

MERCI

Housed in a former factory in the ever-trendy Marais district, this boutique concept store stocks an eclectic mix of vintage, designer and fabulous, often one-of-a-kind items for the home. There is a flower shop and a café afloat with used books. Brought to you by the founders of the Bonpoint children's line, some profits are donated to a charity benefiting children in Madagascar. 111 blvd Beaumarchais (3rd), 01.42.77.00.33.

M° St-Sébastien Froissart

MONTAIGNE MARKET

A novelty on this street of couture houses, this multi-brand boutique offers hot new labels as well as popularly it brands.

57 ave Montaigne (8th), 01.42.56.58.58.

M° Franklin D. Roosevelt

SPRINGSIOUX

This multi-brand boutique in the fashion-forward neighbourhood of the Marais is a haven for rock chic clothing finds and features international designers. The boutique stocks luxury vintage accessories, vinyl records and colourful skateboards by Globe as well as fur designs by French designer Quentin Veron.

BEAUTY BUZZ

LOVELY LOCKS

In the chic 16th arrondissement is where you will find the very chic Valérie Gérin hair salon. In a Haussmannian building, on the ground floor, the salon is welcoming with classical French music playing in the background and professional and friendly service. Raphaël colours and Valérie cuts and you are left feeling like you are floating on cloud nine. Using Sachajuan, a Swedish hair product brand and her own brand, which is produced in Brittany, your hair is treated with kid gloves, ensuring soft locks to turn heads. Nestled between the Place d'Iéna where you will find Musée Guimet, and Avenue Kléber where you will find the romantic Hotel Raphael rooftop terrace, getting your hair done at Valérie's is the perfect break between taking in an exhibit and enjoying a cool cocktail overlooking Paris. Reservations are highly recommended.

20 rue Boissière (16th), 01 45 53 35 40

Say Si to Armani

Capture the elegance of Cate Blanchett, the face of Armani, and steal her scent with the house's new perfume Si. Bergamot, wood and vanilla work together to create Giorgio Armani's new sumptuous perfume, which is described by the luxury house as "an homage to passionate women who are not afraid to take risks". The scent is sensual, captivating and beautifully packaged in an opaque black bottle, inspired by handmade Murano glass.

Available at Sephora

Woo with Weleda

Fresh and masculine, French brand Weleda has introduced a new shower gel for him with a toning and refreshing cocktail of 100% essential oils including organic rosemary. The light gel texture is ideal for cleansing the skin without leaving it feeling dry.

10 ave Franklin D. Roosevelt (8th), 01 53 96 06 15

HYDRATING HOUR

Nourish your skin with Roger & Gallet's latest offerings available at the brand's Boutique du Bonheur on the elegant rue Saint-Honoré. For an ultra-hydrating product try the Huile Gourmande, a sweet body oil that replenishes your skin, leaving it feeling soft while giving it a glimmer, highlighting your summer tan. The skincare brand has also introduced a sorbet body lotion collection with 4 different scents to choose from, each offering a different benefit. Try the orange extract with aloe vera to invigorate your skin or go for the ginger-infused lotion if you're looking for a firming result.

ARTS & ATTRACTIONS

Sunday in the Country

Rolls-Royce, Delahaye, Facel Vega and Aston Martin are among the mythical brands on hand as hundreds of exceptional cars converge in the splendid setting of Chantilly for the Chantilly Arts & Elegance Richard Mille on September 7. The event, which aims to revive the traditional Elegance Contests, is bringing in superb gems of the automobile world and gathering together an impressive line-up of concept cars. Three car contests will be held covering the classic, the concept and the club and a Bugatti Royal will be featured out of competition. The day promises to be one of elegance with entertainment for the whole family and an opportunity to discover the estate of Chantilly. Numerous activities will revolve around French craftsmanship and know-how with the day being devoted to the French Art de Vivre ranging from the fine arts to luxury as well as gastronomy, with the Grands Chefs of Relais & Châteaux creating special menus for the event.

AN ORNATE GATHERING

A beautiful world of art and antiques is spreading out on the Seine on either side of the Pont Alexandre III as Antiquaires et Galeries-Le Salon welcomes some 50 antique and art dealers into two stylised pavilions. Carefully conceived stands present the art of Asia, tableware, Contemporary Art, Art Deco pieces, jewellery and a host of other specialties. Among the extraordinary pieces on display is a set of six finger bowls in opaline from the Charles X epoch, a Waterman fountain pen in 18-ct gold with a diamond-paved cap, circa 1930, and a boat-shaped chandelier. Art experts are on hand to guide you with your purchases and amenities include a tea salon, valet parking and free coat check. – P.V.

From Sept 10 through Sept 21, 11am-7pm, and until 11pm on the 10th, 11th, 16th and 18th

Pont Alexandre III, Rive Droite (Right Bank), Port Champs-Élysées on the banks of the Seine (8th)

RAW AND REFRESHING

A delightful show of original and uninfluenced creation is being played out at the Halle Saint Pierre, which is hosting an exhibition devoted to outsider art. Outsider art, sometimes referred to as raw art, is generally art created by people outside of the artistic establishment and mainstream. The De Stadhof Collection, bringing together some 350 works by 40 emblematic artists, is being showcased in this enticing venue. There are colourful and exuberant works in a host of mediums including painting, sculptures, drawings and installations. There is the impressive and assertive statue sculpture by Kijima in wood and metal, while the Willem van Genk's Centraal Station Amsterdam collage evokes all that a train station is while an intriguing untitled work on paper by Christine Sefoloshha incites one to ponder. – P.V.

A Journey

The powerful Keaka statuery of Nigeria, myriad ritual masks from around the world and a fertility doll of the Fante people of Ghana are all being showcased as the wondrous world of tribal arts is unfolding on the Left Bank for the Parcours des Mondes event. There are objects that are made to heal, others to go to war or to the sea. This voyage into the diversity of the tribal arts of Africa, the Americas, Asia and Oceania showcases exceptional pieces from some 68 carefully selected galleries, among them two bookshops, from around the world and the event features some 30 thematic exhibitions ranging from animals to ancestors. The exhibitions are hosted in art galleries throughout the Beaux-Arts quarter of the Saint-Germain-des-Prés neighbourhood from September 9 through to September 14. – P.V.

11am to 7pm, 3pm-9pm on the 9th, until 5pm on the 13th, and until 9pm on the 12th.

JEWELS OF DESIRE

OLWEN FOREST

Radiant reds, remarkable shapes and intriguing crystals all come together in this brilliant presentation of adornments being held on the edge of town. Vintage jewel expert and collector Olwen Forest is presenting a bold selection of jewellery in an exhibition fittingly entitled Jewels of Desire that is an invitation to a remarkable world, a sparkling world of enticing jewellery beckoning one on a journey of dreams.

The focus of the exhibition is firmly placed on three very singular jewels linked to desire: the cuff bracelet, the sautoir and the brooch.

"People have always been attracted by jewels. They admire them, covet them, desire them," explains Olwen Forest, who in reference to Ancient Egypt remarks, "It was an age rich in highly seductive jewels." She points to the artistic creations in poured glass, "Because the properties of glass already fascinated in that great historical period," notes Olwen.

Iconic cuff bracelets, emblematic of the machine age, are one of the three stars of the show with leading designers like Coco Chanel, Jean Patou and Yves Saint Laurent often showcasing the atypical yet chic items. A spectacular piece in the show by Jean-Louis Scherrer with a large piece of red poured glass in the centre is particularly eye-catching.

Sautoirs, the long chains designed in myriad ways be it with beads, coins, charms and more, are jewels in perpetual motion, moving according to one's gestures, steps, postures. "It is the ultimate jewel of freedom," explains Olwen.

And for some, elegance means wearing several at once. "That's what Coco Chanel did," says Olwen, "She was very avant-garde in wearing this type of necklace."

Brooches, objects in and of themselves, are highlighted in the show, too. "A brooch could become a conversation piece," explains Olwen, adding that brooches can be elaborate or amusing. One of the pieces in the show not to be missed is the lipstick brooch.

Couture took a great interest in brooches given their originality and refinement. "Roger Jean-Pierre, a backbone of French couture, created numerous brooches in three dimensions for Elsa Schiaparelli, Christian Dior, Balenciaga, Givenchy," underscores Olwen.

"A jewel always has a story to tell," says Olwen Forest, who has over the years, carefully unearthed unique pieces during her journeys, discoveries and encounters, and her Jewels of Desire exhibition reveals pieces straight from the soul. She explains, "These jewels, which incite the desire to possess them, to wear them but which invite, too, desire in and of itself."

ADVERTORIAL

“Antiquaires et Galeristes-Le Salon” will be among the beacon events heralding in the season of the arts in Paris.

Just footsteps away from the Grand Palais, this Off art show will be held on either side of the Pont Alexandre III bridge from September 10th to September 21st, 2014.

An Off Art Show? Not all that off... Being held for the eighth year, the art show has reached its maturity. Caroline Margeridon imagined for young antique dealers two stylised pavilions embellished with glass roofs on the quays offering visitors a compendium of exceptional works with in the background an impregnable view onto the Seine.

This prestigious show will welcome some 50 antique dealers and gallery owners selected among the finest in the profession and most of whom are members of the S.N.A., the French association of antique dealers. An independent committee of experts recognised by all ensures the authenticity of each work.

Antique dealers and gallery owners bring our heritage to life. Following productive research into the distinguishing features of the works, the antique dealers restore them and set them off within the harmonious setting of their stand.

An inseparable partner of contemporary creation, the gallery owners offer artists an indispensable visibility and encounters with art lovers. Often they accompany them in the evolution of their notoriety and the increase in their selling price.

Caroline Margeridon, a skilled organiser -- and charismatic, as well -- of leading art shows in Paris is participating in the dynamic of the renewal of the art business. The traditional shows of old art, the “classics” are evolving towards trendy “up to date” art shows where works of the 18th century are found side by side with works of vintage, design and slow design where the blend of styles and epochs surprises and brings about new aspirations in the art market.

As one ambles about the walkways one can admire, notably, at the Galerie Adam a magnificent ceremonial console table from Spain, semi-precious stones and volcanic lava stone by Gian Lorenzo Bernini, known as Bernini. Richard Duflot will put into the spotlight his domain of predilection, Art Déco furniture, with a table in palm wood by Printz. The Galerie Eric Beaumont, specialised in old French and Flemish paintings, will present a still life of fruits and a parrot on an entablature of Andries Benedetti. Gilles Rouveyrol will exhibit an Art Nouveau dumb waiter in crystal and silver-coloured metal from the goldsmith Gallia. Annie Minet and Luc Merenda, the exclusive agents in France of the contemporary Chinese artist Li Chen, will present one of his awe-inspiring bronze sculptures entitled “The Pursuer”.

AN ANGEL OF AN AUCTION

A very special charity auction is taking place this month in the Charente region of France for which the region's cognac houses have donated 25 exceptional bottles of cognac. This year the proceeds of the auction will go to the international charity, Children in Crisis and the Restos du Coeur Charente, the local branch of the French national food kitchen charity. The sale is called La Part des Anges meaning angels' share referring to the alcohol that evaporates out of barrels during the ageing process. Every lot in the auction is rare and prestigious, and has a story behind it like the Pierre Ferrand 1914, the Last Cask, for the cognac of 1914 was distilled entirely by women. Another bottle on the block is Larsen's Commémoration Drakkar 1952 in a boat-shaped crystal decanter by Baccarat. – P.V.

The auction will be held at the Abbaye de Bassac, Charente on Sept 18 in the evening. To bid online, starting on September 1, go to www.paddle8.com/auctions/lapartdesanges.

AN EXPERIENCE OF FRENCH-STYLE LUXURY

An unforgettable moment in the heart of Paris

Yachts de Paris combines the spirit of yachting with the French 'art of living'.

Choose absolute luxury aboard the CACHEMIRE for a private dinner or opt for the DON JUAN II restaurant, the charm and discreet elegance of which will win you over.

On board, enjoy Chef Guy Krenzer's ('Meilleur Ouvrier de France') cuisine while you marvel at a spectacle that only Paris can offer.

An irresistible voyage beyond time.

DINING

JAMIN

Jamin, a name that hails out of the pantheon of Parisian restaurants, remains today, under the helm of Alain Pras with David Tomasini, firmly inscribed on the Parisian gourmet landscape. Fine dining at Jamin is somewhat akin to enjoying the seeming sanctuary of a private yacht with discrete porthole windows and lovely works of art imparting a certain discretion onto the dining room as courses unfold in a luscious litany of tasteful savours from chef Martin Lenoir. One of the more intriguing starters is a tartar of crayfish with lime zests while favourite dishes on the appetiser menu include the colourful salad of crunchy prawns and a fusion dish of prawn raviolis in a beguiling broth of ginger. The unctuous veal filet enhanced by lemon confit and served with homemade purée is an excellent choice as a main dish but seafood lovers might want to opt for the prawn risotto flavoured with fresh herbs. A perfectly executed crème brûlée with cane sugar proved perfect for dessert. – Patricia Valicenti

32 rue de Longchamp (16th), 01 45 53 00 07

Chez Savy

Just off the very fashionable Avenue Montaigne is where you will find one of the city's most authentic brasseries. Chez Savy is a Parisian institution, one that fashion stylists, entertainers and journalists consider as their local bistro. One of the smallest brasseries in the city, it resembles a dining-car with its long and narrow space and antique luggage racks. Here, in an art deco décor with a mosaic floor and cosy seats fitted into alcoves, you will discover a mouth-watering menu that features traditional French fare including foie gras served with toasted baguette bread, marinated herring served with a home-style potato salad and of course the steak tartare served with frites.

And not to be missed is the salted caramel pot de crème, a delicious treat of salted caramel-flavoured cream. - S.I.

Le Bistrot du Sud-Ouest

Proudly sporting its new "Fait Maison" label, or the official certification that was recently created in France to reward restaurants which serve food authentically home-cooked on the premises (as opposed to being industrially catered) by making consumers aware of it, this delightful southwestern French bistro on the Left Bank is a terrific choice for a hearty and delicious meal after a summer of salads. Among other produce, the southwest of France is renowned for its foie gras and duck, and both products are on the menu here in a variety of excellent preparations at exceptionally reasonable prices. So start off with some foie gras and then try the confit de canard, or duck that's been lusciously preserved in its own render fat and then grilled, or perhaps a juicy duck breast with mushrooms and potatoes sautéed in duck fat with garlic. They also serve an excellent cassoulet, and there are many appealing options for anyone looking for a lighter meal, including grilled salmon with baby vegetables or a very generously garnished salad. Finish up with a slice of gâteau Basque from Pariès, the famous baker in the Basque country, some chocolate mousse or a fruit salad, and don't miss the good selection of southwestern French wines, including a fine Madiran for those who prefer red and an excellent Jurançon for white wine drinkers. - A.L.

La Cantine Max y Jeremy

If you agree that part of the fun of visiting another city is discovering one of those neighbourhoods that's beloved by the locals but pretty much unknown to tourists, you might enjoy a night on the town along the ever livelier but still un-gentrified rue du Faubourg-Saint-Denis in the 10th arrondissement. This old working-class neighbourhood is in the midst of transitioning to a young, creative and animated new future with lots of young designers, photographers, website and social media companies choosing to set up shop in this corner of Paris, and a delicious place to take the quartier's pulse is La Cantine Max y Jeremy, a new Basque and Spanish tapas bar and restaurant by Maxime Gues and Jeremy Gatelet, whose first restaurant, Max y Jeremy, in the Marais has become a hit. If the weather's good, sit at a table on the terrace out front for some first rate people watching over excellent tapas (served only at dinner—there's a different yet similar menu at lunch), including ham croquettes, txistorra (red pepper brightened Basque sausages), or pimento de Padron, the deep-fried green peppers that are a Spanish favourite. Next up, serious carnivores may want to order the spectacular côte de boeuf (rib-steak) for two or three as it usually weighs in at between two and three pounds, which comes from Basque butcher Imanol Jaca, who shops for his stunning good meat in Galicia in Spain. Otherwise, go with a salad, some Basque charcuterie or a cheeseboard. Appealing desserts include citrus salad dressed with olive oil and cumin, cheesecake and an excellent crème brûlée, and service is notably friendly and attentive. – A.L.

Flavours of India

In the city's bourgeoisie neighbourhood, Neuilly, is where you will find one of the best and authentic Indian restaurants in the French capital, Ashiana. In a spacious dining area beautifully decorated with artwork from India, the family-run restaurant offers a warm welcome, attentive service and an endless menu of traditional north Indian dishes. Sample the freshly baked naan bread with cheese and the slightly spicy samosas to start then order the butter chicken and maybe the Dall Tarka, a spicy lentil curry, to be enjoyed with lightly flavoured basmati rice. Ashiana also serves authentic, and rich, desserts such as Kulfi, an Indian ice-cream made from milk, almonds and pistachio. This is a perfect table for a quiet dinner for two or a family dinner after a day of shopping at La Défense. - S.I.

CHEZ ANDRÉ

On a soft night in early September, the dining room at this long-running bistro with a winsome 1940's charm in the heart of the Golden Triangle, or the chic neighbourhood that's the powerhouse of the French fashion industry and which is bound by the Champs-Élysées, the Avenue Montaigne and the Avenue George V, is filled with a well-dressed and intriguingly international crowd. "Everyday is a living alphabet of nationalities here," quips a friendly waitress when she arrives at the table with flutes of Champagne over which to study the menu and is asked about this hugely popular bistro's clientele. It's easy to see why too, ever since it opened in 1936, Chez André has been a picture perfect rendering of what the whole world thinks a Parisian bistro should be right down to the big zinc-clad bar just inside the front door. As soon as you're seated on a banquette, you've got a ringside seat to a busy, happy, lively show. There are the happy sounds of Champagne corks popping and cutlery on china, plus the low laughter-punctuated murmur of a crowd that's eating well, the busy ballet of the waitresses in black dresses with white collars, like something from a 1950's film about Paris. Then there's the visual and olfactory pleasure of a great gastronomic spectacle as white tureens of onion soup capped with melted cheese, pink slabs of foie gras, and garlicky-smelling escargots go by. In this spot of happy place, everyone looks at everyone else's plate, so that the nice couple from Christchurch end up advising their pleasant opposites from Chicago that the roasted French lamb, a house specialty, is just delicious. "And since we're Kiwis, we know a thing or two about good lamb too," says the gent. But Chez André isn't just for visitors to Paris. A young dark-eyed Italian born designer who's just moved to Paris to work for a famous French fashion house is happily tucking into a platter of roast chicken with a well-known Parisian fashion editor in another corner of the room, and an easily recognised French politician is sharing a bowl of chocolate mousse, and a spoon, with a strikingly beautiful blonde woman who may or may not be his wife. And a well-known weather girl from one of the major French television stations stoically and politely responds to repeated requests from other diners as to whether or not the weather will be good the next day as she tries to enjoy a perfectly cooked veal kidney with sauce Béarnaise. Then there's the dapper older man in a well-cut grey suit with a cornflower in his lapel who is clearly a regular, since he's immediately escorted to a quiet corner table when he comes through the front door and served a glass of Lillet, the aperitif from Bordeaux, a minute later. "I've been eating here ever since my grandmother first took me as a boy the week that they opened," he volunteers to the bemused English honeymooners next to him. "And I think it may just be the only good habit I have," he says with a chuckle, adding, "As long as we have Chez André, we'll always have Paris."

GOURMET

BY PATRICIA VALICENTI

A gourmet way to go back to school this season might be to settle into some cooking classes and workshops. L'Ecole Lenôtre offers a complete range of classes for children and adults, beginners and those seeking to perfect their savoir-faire. Classes welcome 8 to 10 participants for half day cooking classes or theme courses like delving into the use of spices, the preparation and cooking of fish and foie gras as well as chocolate-making techniques. You can even learn how to prepare Lenôtre's fabulous pastries. On Wednesdays, children aged between 8 and 11 can enjoy a 90-minute workshop to learn how to prepare quiches, hamburgers, chicken or vanilla and chocolate macarons. Teenagers aren't left out of the culinary fun either with their own special 3-hour course in the preparation of a formal dinner.

On September 20th a very special workshop at Lenôtre is on the agenda with the author and pastry creator Elodie Martins who will teach you how to make her highly original Badou Badou macarons. Lenôtre is launching a capsule collection of her macarons created with the complicity of Lenôtre's executive chef and director of creation Guy Krenzer. The Badou Badou workshop lasts for three hours during which Elodie also gives helpful hints for making sweets.

Everyday Ô Chateau, a wine bar and restaurant, welcomes visitors for unique wine tasting courses in a vaulted cellar of thick stonewalls in a mansion that once belonged to the Marquise de Pompadour. The various tasting sessions enable the attendee to discover the wealth of France's vineyards. Several workshops are on offer, of note is the two-hour Off the Beaten Tracks Wine Tasting, which takes a stronger historical approach than the other tastings and explores out of the ordinary varietals and also offers an insight into the business of wine. A Tour de France of wine and a grands crus tasting are among the offerings and high-end private group tastings for a maximum of four people can also be arranged.

Meanwhile, a young and innovative cheese specialist has developed fun and educational workshops to learn about the delicious, intricate and elaborate world of French cheeses. Pierre Brisson selects the fine cheeses from producers or those who age cheese, seeking out the best in traditionally produced cheeses to educate participants about the story behind cheese, how it's made, how to taste it and how to choose it the next time you're in a cheese shop. The two-hour tasting sessions feature a wide range of cheeses, three or four different wines depending upon the cheeses and freshly baked bread. A class for serious cheese lovers is available too, featuring 10 rare cheeses along with wine and bread, but also apples and coffee beans to reflect the conditions at a professional cheese tasting. Customised private tastings can be arranged as well.

DURAND DUPONT

FRENCH CUISINE

- ▶ Open everyday, service non stop from 8am to 2am ▶ Brunch every Sunday
- ▶ Patio and terrace available ▶ Afterwork Monday to Saturday evenings with DJ's

Situated on a quiet square in the west of Paris, next to Porte Maillot, this restaurant not only offers delicious French fare but also a charming terrace to soak in the Parisian sun. Durand Dupont is an ideal table for a business lunch or a dinner in the intimate patio. And from the cellar, you can enjoy the ideal wine chosen by the best sommeliers to accompany a variety of dishes.

For a starter enjoy mozzarella «burrata» with fresh cherry tomatoes and basil. Then savour the thai-style beef with basmati rice. Followed by a tasty dessert of lemon meringue pie with «yuzu» lemon.

ENTERTAINMENT

BY SANDRA ISKANDER

COCKTAIL HOUR

While holidaying in the Fashion Capital one of the must-dos during your sejour is to enjoy a cocktail in a fabulously chic bar. The Pershing Hall Hotel Bar & Lounge, located just off the Champs-Élysées, is definitely one of the city's best bars where you can order a classic Cointreau Fizz or discover one of their many original cocktails. Overlooking the hotel's famous hanging garden, the bar is open daily from 6pm.

49 rue Pierre Charron (8th), 01 58 36 58 00

Champagne Tasting

A trip to Paris goes hand in hand with sipping on exquisite French champagne and this month the Champs-Élysées Plaza Hotel is hosting a chic soiree on Thursday the 18th where you are invited to do just that. The champagne tasting, held in the hotel's Le 35 bar, perfectly packages fine bubbles, tasty tapas and the smooth sounds of jazz in the one evening, giving you a night in Paris to remember.

ADVERTORIAL

How to become Parisian in one hour?

As tourists or expats in Paris there are some quirks we have all noticed among the Parisians, the way they march to their destinations, their constant pouting and the way they order at restaurants. Olivier Giraud, the very talented and handsome comedian, has too, noticed that the Parisians are unique in their behaviour, and has decided to bring all those idiosyncrasies to light.

Born in Bordeaux, Olivier moved to Paris to study hotel management and after graduating he moved to the Unites States where he managed a restaurant of a 5-star hotel. After four years, and many soul-searching nights, he decided to return to France and follow his real dream of becoming a comedian.

Having experienced the cultural differences between the Parisians and Americans while in Florida, and having observed for himself the tourists of all nationalities in Paris, he decided to not shy away from the hard-hitting questions of how one becomes a real Parisian. How do you grab a waiter's attention in a café? In the metro, what do you do if you see an older lady or a pregnant woman? And how do you behave in a cab?

Putting together a one man show, How to be Parisian in one hour?, the stand-up comic will leave you rolling in your seat from laughter and 100% prepared for any situation in the City of Light. Entirely performed in English, it is a great show for everyone, including Parisians who will no doubt get a good laugh at themselves.

It is not an easy feat to master the Parisian attitude but Olivier has put together a fail-proof guideline of French etiquette that will leave you embracing the oh la la factor. Non-stop laughter from a real Parisian guaranteed to leave you wanting more.

where now PARIS

Paris is crossed by 14 Métro lines and five RER (express suburban) lines, all numbered and named for their final destination (terminus). Did you know that there are 300 stations that make up Paris' metro system?

Each Métro trip requires one ticket regardless of how many transfers you make, though you must buy an extra ticket for the RER outside the city limits. Keep your ticket until you exit.

Tickets are sold in all stations and in cafés (tabacs) with a ticket sign outside, single (1.70€/2€ if purchased on a bus) or by 10 (un carnet - 13.70€). This map includes the new tramway line.

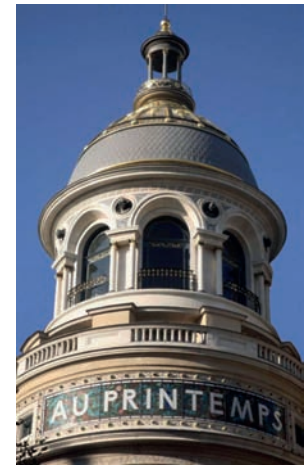

"Paris Visite" passes offer unlimited travel on the Métro and buses (1-day 10.85€, 2-day 17.65€, 3-day 24.10€, 5-day 34.70€). The Métro and RER start running at 5:30am, and stop around 1 am.

While the Métro is an extremely safe way to travel, watch out for pickpockets in crowded trains and stations. For information in English, call the transportation company (RATP) directly at 08.92.68.41.14.

My Paris

If one of our readers is only in Paris for 24 hours what one thing would you recommend they do?

A visit to Musée d'Orsay, as it is definitely a unique place. Then I would recommend discovering the streets of Paris by walking through some of its very Parisian neighbourhoods. I would also recommend dining in an authentic Parisian bistro.

For our readers who are looking for a traditional Parisian bistro serving authentic French fare, where would you book them a table?

Alain Ducasse's bistros are perfect. I suggest Benoît, Aux Lyonnais or Allard.

Paris is well-known for its magnificent monuments, from where would you suggest our readers get the best view of the city?

The Eiffel Tower remains an icon. So is the view from the Sacré Coeur. But personally, I

Nicolas
AMELOT

Assistant Head Concierge
Radisson Blu Hotel Nice

Where recently sat with the Head Concierge to pick his brain on where and what our readers should go and see while visiting the French capital particularly like the view from the river Seine's bridges. For example the view from the Pont des Arts, between the Institut de France and the Louvre, with the river inviting visitors to daydream.

As the fashion capital, which areas do you think showcase the best fashions?

Rue du Faubourg Saint-Honoré, Saint-Germain and the Grands Boulevards!

What have you recently discovered in Paris that you would advise guests to see?

The Parc Zoologique de Paris. It has completely changed.

What is a location in Paris that has recently impressed you?

The Grand Palais, Europe's largest glass roof.

Where is one of the areas in Paris that is ideal for a leisurely stroll?

A stroll along the Seine is always a wonderful moment.

MY PERFECT DAY

9am Start the day with a visit of the Impressionist's gallery in the Musée d'Orsay, on the last floor of the museum, which offers a splendid panoramic view of Paris.

12pm Have lunch at Christian Constant on rue Saint Dominique.

3pm Take an afternoon stroll through Saint-Germain or the Marais, where there are plenty of galleries and boutiques to discover, then stop at Les Deux Magots or Mariage Frères for teatime.

9pm. Enjoy a night out at Mugler Folies.
